Stop random and silent password guessing of your Gmail and Facebook account! No longer need to wake up at 4 AM to try and guess your Gmail password!

Use PasswordMe to prevent strangers from guessing your password, and use Stylized PasswordMe to organize your passwords. Every time you log on to a website or create an account, you need to remember a password. It can become a hassle to manage all of these passwords. But the situation gets even worse when people begin to choose nonsense words like “password” as their password. You might as well write down a nonsense word on a piece of paper and put it in your wallet. If you have a simple Gmail account and your social life on Facebook, you would like to install PasswordMe Facebook Client. PasswordMe ensures your privacy and security. How is PasswordMe different?

PasswordMe prevents your account from being hacked by allowing your friends and family members access the information you need. PasswordMe allows you to lock the information in a secure container, so your friends cannot read your email, messages, or photos. PasswordMe allows you to share the information with your friends and family, since you will be able to share the password of your Gmail or Facebook account to them, so they can login to the account. With this feature, you can share the information if you wish to share the password or not, but if you do, you should make sure that they are trustworthy friends or family members. You should check their email and Facebook, and make sure they haven't done anything wrong. When you open your email, you might notice a new message from your email provider. Normally, you don't have to worry about such messages unless you use the same email provider. From now on, you can safely remove Gmail from the notification list. Steps to disable Gmail notifier: Click the Gmail icon in your notification area on the right side of the system clock. Select 'On' from the drop-down menu that appears. Change or remove any other notifications that you like. When you are done, click the 'Settings' button next to 'Gmail Notifications'. Turn it off by selecting 'Disable' from the drop-down menu. You can now get back to your email like any other day. Note: This feature can be found under Settings, Accounts, and Import/export. Functions Abandoned by Google While a Gmail account is used by many people, it is owned by Google instead. You can turn Gmail off if you like, but this might cause some functionality issues. Check the 'Turn off web app' section of this guide to learn how to do it.

Cookies and Google services
Google handles cookies and other associated functions of the Gmail app. For example, Google knows when you open a Gmail message for the first time, or when you change Gmail's theme to look a certain way. When you turn Gmail off, there is no need for cookies to function properly. Contacts sync Google makes it possible for you to share your contacts between your devices.

This allows you to see contact details in your mobile phone or tablet, laptop, or your desktop computer when you are out and about. If you turn off contacts sync, you won't be able to access your contacts remotely from the cloud. Forwarding If you use Gmail to handle your email, it is possible to set up forwarding. This means that an email that comes to the Gmail app can be sent via other email services, like

---

Microsoft's Outlook or Apple Mail. Your recipient gets an email copy of the original message. If you like to make things easier on yourself, just disable Gmail in the notification settings. It should be the first message you turn off if you don't want to see it on your email client. Free mobile apps
