The Web App is a browser extension which changes the way that Yahoo! search works. It now features an easy to use interface, and innovative applications that allow you to access Flickr and some other websites with a single click. You can use it as an extension of the Web and Social applications in your Yahoo! search box, or as a standalone tool for accessing various websites. All features of the Web App are available in one, easy-to-use application. Unlike other browser extensions, it comes with its own, custom interface, and a comprehensive set of features. The new Web App is very easy to use and to configure. The design is clean and smart, and provides a simple and intuitive set of buttons. You can set up the search results web pages for any website and at any time. You can set up a single page for any site, or for all your sites, and you can also set up search pages for specific websites. You can set up a few of these pages for faster access to search. You can make the Web App your homepage, and you can even customize it to suit your needs. There are several ways to make a search with the Web App. It can be the only way for a search, or the default way for a search. If you enable one of the other ways of searching (either by dragging the Web App to the right side of the search box, or by clicking on the "Show Search Methods" button), the Web App will be replaced with the other method. The Web App also provides a few other ways of searching, including a tab-based interface, a mini-browser interface, and a button-based search interface. You can also add any URL, such as Yahoo! finance pages, Yahoo! weather pages, Twitter feeds, Google search results, and many other pages, to the Web App. It is also possible to add custom pages for specific websites. You can set up these custom pages to be available through a "Search" button on the toolbar, or through an "Advanced" button. These search pages will show up whenever you do a search from the Search Bar, and from the "Advanced" button. The Web App works with Web applications, such as Yahoo! Weather, Yahoo! Finance, and most of the other sites which have their own Web applications. It will show up under the "Apps" menu, and it will also have a separate icon for each application. You can also add a link to the Web App on your home page.
