have an ebay account and i think i got this. It says it's my gift! I just got an email from my hubby, and he says it's not his. And I know they are two different people. My husband is in the oil and gas business, and he hasn't dealt with these people before, that's why they don't have his name on it. Edit: The box is awesome. The sheets are perfect and look more expensive than they were. Thank you awesome SS. Photo Credit: Brad Penner-USA TODAY Sports After watching a few World Juniors over the holidays I was left wondering why I have such a soft spot for this tournament. The level is as close to a low-ranking youth tournament as you will find. Most of the games don't last more than fifty minutes, many less. There aren't many teams that advance that are even good enough to compete in the OHL, NCAA, or college ranks (they would probably be serviceable in the USHL or NAHL). If a team manages to compete and advance for an OHL Championship trophy that team has probably been in the top-25 in the country. Entering the tournament there were three teams that had a real chance to advance to the gold medal game: Russia, Sweden, and Switzerland. The big two, Russia and Sweden, had pretty even odds of advancing, but Russia had to face the defending champs in the quarterfinal and Sweden had to face the team that came in last in the group stage. However, the matchup panned out better for Switzerland, thanks to a few great goaltending performances. The Swiss improved to 18-3-1 in their lifetime at the World Juniors (per FCS) and managed to make it to the semifinals with a 6-4-1-1 record in group play. Unlike their stronger opponents, the Swiss didn't need to rely on great goaltending for advancement and used their speed to break down their opponents. In the quarterfinals the Swiss took on the high-powered squad of the United States. Coming into this matchup, the Swiss had not beaten the Americans at the World Juniors since
