Q: Python / termios write and read not working I'm trying to write a simple function which prints and reads from the terminal. The function does what is expected when exiting with CTRL+C and returning to the terminal. However when returning to shell and executing the code the read fails with a blank line. The only update to code is that the function checks if it is interactive. However removing it from the code makes it work perfectly and returning to the shell and executing the program will also exit the terminal. Updated code, with some suggested changes, are below: `import subprocess, sys, time, os, import termios` `def write_and_read(fd): f = open(f'd:\\data\\test.txt', 'w') f.close() p = subprocess.Popen(['cmd', fd], stdin=subprocess.PIPE, stdout=subprocess.PIPE`
