The program is the tool for reading the passcodes hidden under asterisk. The tool reads the passwords from the Windows registry. In fact, it is a wrapper for a hard coded program. The only function this program provides is to reveal hidden passwords for Windows systems. Note that this application does not show the password itself; instead it shows its location where the password is stored by your system. The tool doesn't work on modern operating systems as it doesn't use Windows registry. It's a side-effect of the program that runs the hard coded program. Do keep in mind that the program is quite old and the tested versions of Windows 10, 8, and 7 do not work with it anymore. Here's a video walkthrough of the Password Revealer:

After revealing the passwords that are saved in the system's registry, you will be presented with an option for deleting them. In case they were created by a malicious entity, it will also be necessary to delete them. Password Recovery The tool is also able to recover passwords from the recovered key in the Windows registry. This is done by a hard coded program. Please note that the whole process is not reversible, so you should never delete the keys in the system's registry. We haven't uploaded the tool in our website due to the fact that the functionality and the output is based on the old ways of retrieving information. The tool was tested on Windows XP and Windows 7, but as mentioned earlier, the old versions of Windows simply don't support this. Download Password Revealer To download the tool, please follow the link below. A lightweight installer executable will download on your computer and allow you to run Password Revealer right away after download without any additional installations or setup required. Mucoadhesive films for retention of protein drugs. The formulation of mucoadhesive films capable of delivering protein drugs presents significant challenges. The films have to withstand the shear forces associated with oral administration and contain high concentrations of protein in order to enhance bioavailability. The objective of this study was to develop a large diameter biopolymer film for use as a mucoadhesive reservoir for proteins. Hydrophilic, biodegradable and mucoadhesive polymers were used to develop low dose films (500 microg/cm<sup>2</sup>) with (1) high film-forming capacity; (2) control release of protein; and (3) minimal loss of bioactivity.
