In the context of the chronic vascular disease, the role of advanced glycation end products (AGEs) is tightly related to their ability to induce the damage in the arterial wall. Cardiovascular complications of diabetes and related disorders remain the leading cause of death worldwide. Even if the pathogenetic mechanisms involved in the development of chronic vascular diseases in diabetes are still not completely elucidated, the excessive formation of AGEs is recognized to be an important contributor of vascular damages, in particular in the collagen-rich structures, such as the aorta and the coronary arteries, where they may contribute to the development of vascular occlusive disorders. Dublin, Ireland's 1st is the world's first video game championship, simply call it Dublin. Antigen-presenting cells (APCs), such as macrophages, have an important role in initiating and directing adaptive immunity. Understanding the interaction between bacterial pathogens and APCs is crucial for the development of successful vaccines.

Here, we report the development of a novel method for extraction of APCs directly from mixed human leukocyte populations. The cells were separated by centrifugation to create a cell pellet containing monocytes, monocyte-derived macrophages (MDM), and peripheral blood mononuclear cells (PBMC). The formed pellet was resuspended in
